Psychological Torture, CIA-Style

The "Human Resource Exploitation Training Manual--1983," was written by the Central Intelligence Agency and used to teach Latin American security forces how to extract information from prisoners. The manual was obtained through a Freedom of Information Act request filed by the Baltimore Sun. In 1985, the CIA allegedly renounced the use of "coercive interrogation techniques." However, there's a slim chance other police agencies might have a copy on hand. We urge patriotic police officers to work with the militia by exposing such suspect training manuals and material.

THEORY OF COERCION

The purpose of all coercive techniques is to induce psychological regression in the subject by bringing a superior outside force to bear on his will to resist. Regression is basically a loss of autonomy, a reversion to an earlier behavioral level. As the subject regresses, his learned personality traits fall away in reverse chronological order. He begins to lose the capacity to carry out the highest creative activities, to deal with complex situations, or to cope with stressful interpersonal relationships or repeated frustrations.

COERCIVE TECHNIQUES

1) Arrest -- The manner and timing of the subject's arrest should be planned to achieve surprise and the maximum amount of mental discomfort. He should therefore be arrested at a moment when he least expects it and when his mental and physical resistance are at their lowest--ideally, in the early hours of the morning. When arrested at this time, most subjects experience intense feelings of shock, insecurity, and psychological stress, and have great difficulty adjusting to the situation.

2) Detention -- A person's sense of identity depends upon the continuity in his surroundings, habits, appearance, relations with others, etc. Detention permits the questioner to cut through these links and throw the subject back upon his own unaided internal resources. Detention should be planned to enhance the subject's feelings of being cut off from anything known and reassuring.

3) Deprivation of Sensory Stimuli-- Solitary confinement acts on most persons as a powerful stress. The symptoms most commonly produced by solitary confinement are superstition, intense love of any other living thing, perceiving inanimate objects as alive, hallucinations, and delusions.

4) Threats and Fear -- The threat of coercion usually weakens or destroys resistance more effectively than coercion itself. For example, the threat to inflict pain can trigger fears more damaging than the immediate sensation of pain. The threat of death has been found to be worse than useless. The principal reason is that it often induces sheer hopelessness; the subject feels that he is as likely to be condemned after compliance as before. Some subjects recognize that the threat is a bluff and that silencing them forever would defeat the questioner's purpose. If a subject refuses to comply after a threat has been made, it must be carried out. Otherwise, subsequent threats will also prove ineffective.

5) Pain -- The torture situation is a contest between the subject and his tormentor. Pain that is being inflicted upon the subject from outside himself may actually intensify his will to resist. On the other hand, pain that he feels he is inflicting upon himself is more likely to sap his resistance. For example, if he is required to maintain a rigid position such as standing at attention or sitting on a stool for long periods of time, the immediate source of discomfort is not the questioner but the subject himself. After awhile, the subject is likely to exhaust his internal motivational strength.

6) Hypnosis and Heightened Suggestibility -- Answers obtained from the subject under the influence of hypnotism are highly suspect, as they are often based upon the suggestions of the questioner and are distorted or fabricated. However, the subject's strong desire to escape the stress of the situation can create a state of mind called "heightened suggestibility." The questioner can take advantage of this state of mind by creating a situation in which the subject will cooperate because he believes he has been hypnotized. This hypnotic situation can be created using the "magic room" technique. For example, the subject is given a hypnotic suggestion that his hand is growing warm. However, his hand actually does become warm with the aid of a concealed diathermy machine. He may be given a suggestion that a cigarette will taste bitter and could be given a cigarette prepared to have a slight but noticeably bitter taste.

7) Narcosis -- There is no drug that can force every subject to divulge all the information he has, but it is possible to create a mistaken belief that a subject has been drugged by using the "placebo" technique. The subject is given a placebo (a harmless sugar pill) and later is told he was given a truth serum that will make him want to talk and that will also prevent his lying. His desire to find an excuse for compliance, which is his only avenue of escape from his depressing situation, may make him want to believe that he has been drugged and that no one could blame him for telling his story now. This provides him with the rationalization that he needs for cooperating.

REGRESSION

As mentioned earlier, the purpose of all coercive techniques is to induce regression. A few non-coercive techniques can also be used to induce regression, but to a lesser degree than can be obtained with coercive techniques:

- * Persistent manipulation of time
- * Retarding and advancing clocks
- * Serving meals at odd times
- * Disrupting sleep schedules
- * Disorientation regarding day and night
- * Un-patterned questioning sessions
- * Nonsensical questioning
- * Ignoring halfhearted attempts to cooperate
- * Rewarding non-cooperation

Whether regression occurs spontaneously under detention or is induced by the questioner, it should not be allowed to continue beyond the point necessary to obtain compliance. A psychiatrist should be present if severe techniques are to be employed, to ensure full reversal later. As soon as possible, the questioner should provide the subject with the rationalization that he needs for giving in and cooperating. This rationalization is likely to be elementary, an adult version of a childhood excuse such as:

1. "They made you do it."
2. "All the other boys are doing it."
3. "You're really a good boy at heart."

Judge Overturns Law Creating Gun-free Zones

A state judge has overturned a Roseland, NJ ordinance that established gun-free zones near schools, parks, playgrounds and libraries in the town, on the grounds that the borough council exceeded its powers when it passed the ban.

Superior Court Judge F. Michael Caruso ruled that only the state legislature can regulate firearms, siding with the NJ affiliate of the National Rifle Association.

Though Roseland has no gun problem, the borough's lawyer David I. Fox said he hopes the local ban will encourage state lawmakers to act on pending legislation that would expand a law against guns on school property.

The Roseland ordinance called for a $1000 fine for anyone who brought a firearm within 1,000 feet of the specified areas, but was never enforced because the Association of NJ Rifle and Pistol Clubs obtained a restraining order. -- Burlington County Times, Nov. 12, 2000

Ed.: If the news item is correct the judge was mistaken in ruling that the legislature can regulate firearms

Utah Town Requires Household Guns

Ed.: While the town fathers of Roseland, NJ seek to protect public areas by denying the people the means with which to protect themselves (see story above) the town council of Virgin, Utah has taken another approach. (Note that the media ignored the Virgin story for four months.)

The tiny town of Virgin, Utah has enacted an ordinance requiring a gun and ammunition in every home for residents' self-defense.

Most of Virgin's 350 residents already own firearms so the initiative has lots of support, Mayor Jay Lee said. Residents had expressed fear that their Second Amendment right to bear arms was under fire so the town council modeled a similar measure passed by a Kennesaw, Georgia about 12 years ago. The mentally ill, convicted felons, conscientious objectors and people who cannot afford to own a gun are exempt. -- Associated Press, Nov. 5, 2000

A Nation Divided (And a message to the Enemy Camp)

If you're wondering what that upset feeling is in your stomach, you're not alone. In my opinion, this is the calm before the storm. Let November 7, 2000 be a red-letter day, and a black mark on American history. The only winner of this election will be the truth; the truth that this nation is more polarized and divided than it has ever been. In other countries, it's at this point that the shooting starts and the blood begins to flow in the streets. Perhaps that explains that upset feeling in your stomach today.

This is not to be interpreted to indicate that we advocate such actions, but if what I fear lies ahead, it's best that someone steps forward and explains to our posterity how and why we got to this crossroad in America. Regardless of the final result, America's choice will remain deadlocked. There will be no negotiating, as there is too much at stake. The party who is on the verge of losing all power in Washington, DC has a track record of ill behavior in vote counting. There has also been a pattern for at least the last decade of violent death and destruction that takes place when their authority is threatened.

For what it's worth, the so-called "exit poll data" is telling the world who is on which side in this conflict. Rural vs Urban, Young vs Old, Black vs White, Gentile vs non-gentile, etc.

To put it simply: It's us against them.

No one wants to admit it, no one wants to say it, but that's the way it is. According to the AP "... the results of the U.S. presidential race was a lesson in democracy's messy glory - or proof that the political system in the world's most powerful nation might just be in need of an overhaul."

Well, to the rest of the world, the Associated Press may be right about that "overhaul." The last one cost us about 600,000 lives back in the 19th century with primitive weaponry. The states where many people's ancestors fought and died for their beliefs in the Constitution led the battle of November 7, 2000 at the ballot box – showing that no matter what happens, or what you hear on CNN, that battle is not over. In fact, the next phase of this battle has just begun.

My prediction: This is GOING to get ugly.

Let us now candidly state these facts to the world:

We represent the side that has become the victim of "political correctness." We are those who have been called names for simply being who we are. We have been demonized for believing that this nation, and the way it governs, is based on certain principles. We are the ones who pay (by force) the majority of the taxes in this country. We are the ones who have placed the majority of our sons and daughters in harm's way in service of our nation. We have been all but banned from the major media, though they now know we exist. We watched as our basic freedoms were being stolen from us. We fought back hard. According to the rules that govern us, we believe we have made a major statement to the world via the ballot box.

We have been under assault. We risk losing our right of free expression, our right to own property, our rights of self-defense and preservation, our right to be governed from our states rather than a federal bureaucracy, and soon, if we do not prevail, our right to adequate representation in our own government.

Even our history and that of our ancestors is under attack. The democratic choice that has been made threatens to end (or at least halt) this downward slide. Our adversaries are on the verge of losing all the power they've held over us for the last 40 years. At this time it appears that our adversaries, like tyrants of the past, simply won't accept defeat and are preparing to take steps to take this fight to the next level.

Citizens of the world, if our side loses this battle, many of us may not live to see what the outcome will be. We can safely predict that your nations will soon share the same attitude about this nation that many share today – that it is run by a tyrant, or a beast. You will witness the military and economic power of this nation used against you at the will of a few, not the will of the people. You will be disarmed, disenfranchised, and taught to hate one another. You will be forced to believe that the U.S. Government, and not our Creator, is your caretaker and will demand complete control over your lives. We will be vanquished. [Ed.: Bull!]

It is for this reason that we cannot – we shall not surrender. We represent a people who believe in a Power Greater than Ourselves.

Today, we live with an unsettling fear. Not a fear of what our adversaries will do, but fear of what we may have to do to preserve, protect, and defend our principles, our beliefs, and our posterity. We do not wish this upon ourselves, but many of us fear that our opposition may have removed all other options. America has made its choice. We have chosen to have a "difference of opinion." We have chosen to be divided. We ask for your prayers and understanding of what may befall us in the coming days.

And to our adversary – the enemy camp:

It is not the Electoral College that needs to be overhauled. If you cannot agree to the rules as they have been written and to the will of those on our side, then once again – we submit to you an offer of disillusionment. That's right – another secession. But this time, it's not just Dixie.

Over the years, those of us who have chosen to remove ourselves from the metropolitan cesspools have learned what independence means. We are those huddled masses yearning to breathe free. We submit that the state of Washington doesn't need Seattle, Illinois doesn't need Chicago, New York doesn't need New York City, etc.

We submit that our children should not be forced to learn what you teach. We submit that our rights to own and defend our property are rights, not privileges. We submit that "multiculturalism" is not "tolerance", but state-sponsored bigotry against political opposition. We submit that Americans are sovereign by birthright, and that NO man shall ever take that away from us. We submit that if no peaceful solution can be reached, then at least 29 of the 50 sovereign states seek other options. You have tried to silence us, ignore us, demonize us, and even disarm us. Let November 7, 2000 be the day when you have been warned via the ballot box that WE SHALL NOT SURRENDER.

Our candidate for president may not have been our first or best choice, but we did choose NOT to be governed by the likes of our opposition.

To our adversaries: We have seen your tactics, we know your strategy. We KNOW you've attempted to deny the right of suffrage to our brethren off our nation's shores and in harm's way. We KNOW you have sought to register those who have not earned the right of suffrage in this country. Still, we prevailed. And we fear that you have little or no plan to simply walk away. If it is war that you are thinking of – if it is a war that you are planning, let it be known that you will not wage a war against the "unsuspecting." You will fire the first shot. You will make the choice.

As you have made your positions known to your leaders, we have done likewise. But unlike you, we take orders from a Higher Power, and not from corrupt men. We are prepared. You have heard our demand. We want our country back. Make no mistake about it - we will and shall continue to use the soap box, the ballot box, the jury box, and if left with no other choice, the other boxes that you seek to take away from us. As many of us today stand in fear of what may become of us, we cannot and shall not prevail until each of us looks deep within ourselves, understands the crossroad at which we stand, looks our adversaries in the eye and says without reservation or hesitation...

...You will have to kill all of us.

ADL, FBI Use Lawyers to Expand Police State

The Anti-Defamation League, in conjunction with the FBI and local law enforcement, is schooling lawyers in how to deal with thought crimes.

Earlier this year, attorneys in Sacramento, Calif., were invited to a prestigious law school seminar at the Mc George College of Law, to learn how to detect hate crimes and other New World Order offenses such as "politically incorrect thinking."

The presenters of this unique training were a combination of local law enforcement officials and guests from a factious human rights organization, the ADL.

One guest was Jonathan Bernstein, a director of the ADL.

Other officials included local representatives in law enforcement, including the agent in charge of the FBI field office, investigator J. M. Maddock, a prosecuting attorney from the Department of Justice, P.L. Seave, Police Chief A. Venegas, Jr., and Sacramento County Sheriff Lou Blanas.

The media often takes an uncritical—almost reverent—attitude toward ADL activities, referring to it as "a respected human rights organization." ADL press releases are usually regarded as "gospel" and often quoted without question or reservation. But the ADL has been found on the wrong side of the law during its more notorious activities.

Police know of the ADL's ties to organized crime, but the media avoids mentioning these ties.

In 1985, the ADL gave its annual "Torch of Liberty Award" to organized crime boss Moe Dalitz.

It was given at a banquet honoring him for the millions of dollars in gang loot he paid the ADL. Dalitz was then a gang boss in Las Vegas and made his money in gambling, loansharking, prostitution and reportedly contract murder.

In California in 1993, the ADL was involved in the corruption of the San Francisco and other police departments and the theft of thousands of confidential police files, which was reported in the December, 1993 California Lawyer. Search warrants were obtained and the ADL's offices in San Francisco and Los Angeles were raided to recover the stolen files.

Although injunctions and restraining orders had been issued against the ADL for violating the civil rights of innocent people and for illegal private spying, we never learned about it because these ADL offenses were ignored by the media.

The joint seating of ADL and police officials as panel participants is of concern because their agenda to promote hate crime legislation and prosecution is fraught with a danger that threatens our constitutional liberties.

Their supposed scholarly review and lobbying efforts are really geared toward creating a police state in the United States. Similar conditions already exist in Germany, Australia, Finland and Canada. And this thought censorship was introduced in these countries by the same influence seated at the Mc George College of Law symposium.

Police and administrative officers sitting on this hate law panel are unwitting pawns in the strategy of the ADL. They are regularly being exposed to an alien mentality that bodes danger for the civil liberties of even the most liberal-minded citizen. The ADL syndicate is really desensitizing and training lawyers and law enforcement how to develop the psychological skills needed to lobby for laws in thought control. We know it as hate crime legislation.

.22 cal Update

My local gunshop owner showed me a .22 cal. round made by Aguila Colibri. It has no gunpowder. It is a primer propelled conical 20 grain bullet. My son's bb gun makes more noise than this round when shot!! The only downside is it will not cycle in an automatic but I have a single shot bolt action it works well in. I got home and took a 30 yard shot at a squirrel and it worked quite well (squirrel gravy and homemade biscuits tonight :). I was so impressed by this round that I bought a case of it (never know when I need to be quiet and get a squirrel or rabbit).

I have been shooting these rounds in my basement for over 8 months now. The sound is about like the old time cap guns, but it pushes the lead bullet at 385 fps. I have a steel bullet trap and a buddy fired it and missed the opening and dented the steel casing. It's pretty quiet, but won't even penetrate a sheet of galvanized metal as used in buckets.

It will absolutely NOT cycle in ANY semi-auto firearm. Use it in revolvers, single shot, or bolt action rifles. I wouldn't want to use it for defense, not even for a muzzle-pressed-against-target

"eyeball shot". It's only valid use is quiet varmint (rats, squirrels, etc., and then only at close range.) They will NOT function a semi-auto action due to the low velocity.

I feel this would be a good addition to your ammo stash. Keep your powder dry.

Citizens Militia of Illinois

PEKIN -- A Pekin man says he will start a new militia group, the Citizens Militia of Illinois.

Trenton Lawrence, 23, a former member of the Western Illinois Militia, made the announcement at a sparsely attended rally that he organized at the Tazewell County Courthouse. Lawrence has said he believes that people should be able to carry guns wherever they go with only a few exceptions, such as taverns. Lawrence said the issue is one that could push the country into another civil war.

"If the federal government bans small arms from the people, there will be a war in this country," Lawrence said.

Lawrence criticized the federal government for being overly influenced by the United Nations, and said he would take up arms and fight if our government disarms its citizens.

But Lawrence said his goals for a new militia group are peaceful. Militia members will be required to perform monthly community service and to challenge existing gun laws peacefully, he said.

"Until we can change (the law), we have to live with it," Lawrence said.

"... I will not rest until I see freedom restored to this country. You have my word." Lawrence said he left the Western Illinois Militia because he had differences with their action plans. He declined to state what those differences were.

Dan Shoemaker, 47, a Galesburg man who describes himself as the leader of the Western Illinois Militia, was convicted of eight felony counts, including threatening a public official and unlawful use of weapons. Shoemaker was arrested based on alleged threats he made to law enforcement officers and others who tried to talk him out of his plans to march through Galesburg and Monmouth while armed with a rifle on June 17 as a demonstration of freedom and the right to bear arms.

The rally drew several supporters of Lawrence's cause and numerous police officers. Members of the Tazewell County Sheriff's Department stood on either side of Lawrence as he spoke. Several of the department's detectives, dressed in street clothing, stood in the background. Two Illinois State Police cars were parked nearby and two uniformed deputies stood near the edge of the lawn. Pekin Police Department squad cars, including the K-9 unit, also circled the block.

Lawrence had planned to hold an armed demonstration, but had said he would not commit a felony. He said deputies searched him before he spoke. During the rally, Lawrence spoke of a different kind of power.

"Look how many people are armed with thoughts," Lawrence said. A man who attended the rally, John Birch of Chicago, said he plans to join Lawrence's militia. Birch said he is a retired U.S. Army officer who has long been an advocate of a change in the law to allow those in Illinois to carry concealed guns.

He said he would stay with the militia group as long as it is a law-abiding and community-service based group.

"Once our guns are gone, the government can do anything they want," Birch said.

Sheriff Bob Huston declined to comment on law enforcement's response to the rally. But he said he was not worried about the new militia because Lawrence assured him that he does not intend to break any laws.

Tazewell County State's Attorney Stewart Umholtz also declined comment.

Lawrence said existing gun laws do nothing to stop criminals from buying guns but keep ordinary citizens from defending themselves. He said he is listed as "armed and dangerous" in law enforcement computers because of his views. "I have never committed a violent crime," Lawrence said. "I have never taken up arms against our government. I have never threatened to kill another human being."

Lawrence praised the work of police officers, but said people must be able to defend themselves.

Lawrence also denounced the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms for its role in the Waco standoff in Texas. He said one of the goals of his militia is to end government violence against citizens.

"(The ATF) will not kill another citizen on my watch," Lawrence said. "And it is my watch. It starts right now."
